Chris Eagle. AHS CEO resigns from post

The man in charge of front-line health care for all Alberta patients resigned Thursday, with critics saying blame for the constant turmoil at the highest ranks of the system must now be placed at the door of Health Minister Fred Horne.

"This is a personal and very difficult decision, but it is one that is right for me and for our organization," Alberta Health Services president and CEO Dr. Chris Eagle said in a statement.

AHS handles front-line care as a standalone entity, but ultimately answers to Horne and his department. Horne thanked Eagle in a statement.

Chief financial officer Duncan Campbell will take over while the search begins for a replacement.

The resignation is more upheaval for Alberta Health Services, which was created in 2008.

Last week, Eagle was forced to apologize to home-care clients who were denied service due to problems with contracted providers in Edmonton.

Wildrose critic Shayne Saskiw says in the years of turmoil, the only constant has been Horne.

Liberal health critic David Swann said Eagle struggled as best he could in a situation where political meddling was constant but meaningful change was not.

"My surprise is that (Eagle) has lasted this long, frankly," said Swann.

"It's a blow again to the stability and the trust in our health-care system, and it's a demonstration that this government is lurching from crisis to crisis." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Homebuilder employees advised who to vote for Leaked memo.

Document reminds staff 'there is more than one candidate for the Mayoral race'

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

An apparent internal memo from a Calgary development and homebuilding company in which the CEO advises employees how to vote in Monday's municipal election raised eyebrows Thursday after it leaked into the public realm.

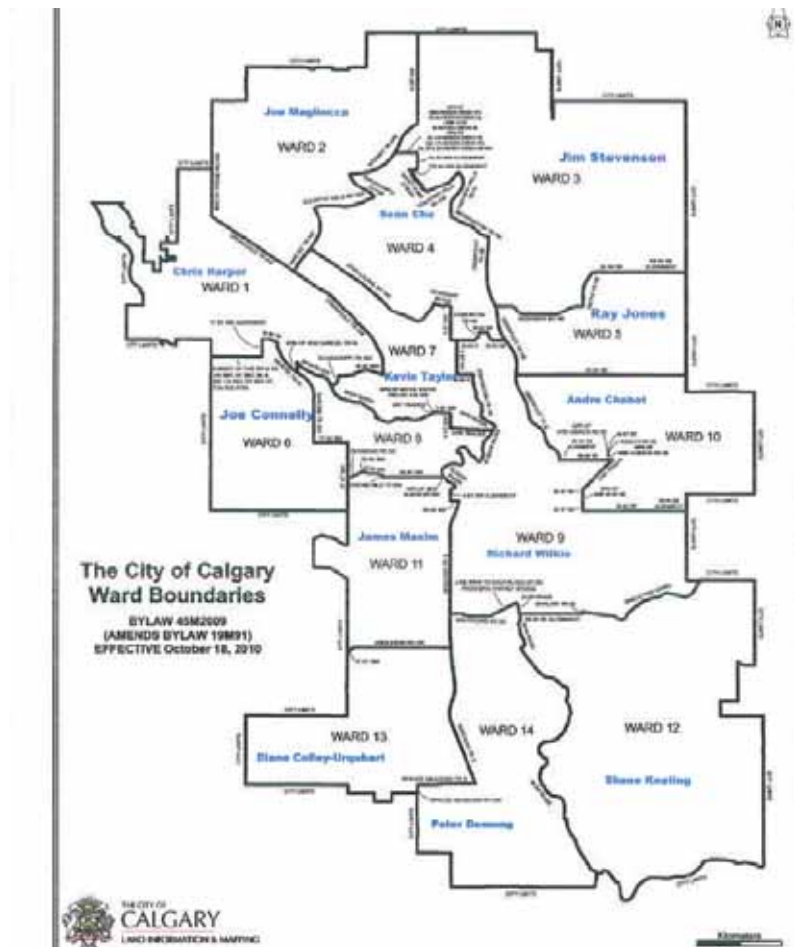

Metro and other local media obtained the five-page document, dated Sept. 27 and addressed to "All Company" from Apex Builder Group CEO Greg Lefebvre.

The memo encourages employees to "elect the candidate that will best represents your interests," but adds, "as an organization we have endorsed the candidates as attached to this memo."

The endorsements include Chris Harper in Ward 1, Joe Magliocca in Ward 2, Jim Stevenson in Ward 3, Sean Chu in Ward 4, Ray Jones in Ward 5, Joe Connelly in Ward 6, Kevin Taylor in Ward 7, Richard Wilkie in Ward 9, Andre Chabot in Ward 10, James Maxim in Ward 11, Shane Keating in Ward 12, Diane Colley-Urquhart in Ward 13 and Peter Demong in Ward 14.

There is no endorsement for Ward 8. The memo also includes an article written by mayoral candidate Jon Lord titled "In Defense of Homebuilders."

Lefebvre did not return a call

A portion of the memo obtained by Metro and other local media Thursday, depicting the city's various wards and the candidates endorsed. CONTRIBUTED from Metro Thursday.

Incumbent mayoral candidate Naheed Nenshi said he's often asked by citizens which candidates are on the "homebuilders slate" he has long alleged exists and welcomed the memo's appearance.

"It was very, very kind for one of the homebuilders to lay it out for us," he said. "It'll help a lot of voters with their decision."

Nenshi said the endorsements are pretty much in line with what he expected except for Harper in Ward 1.

Harper, who was also recently endorsed by the Calgary and District Labour Council, said he didn't ask for either endorsement.

"I'm slate-free and will absolutely stay that way," he said.

Nenshi's website cream of the crop

Not that that's saying much. Many of the sites for the candidates in the municipal election are truly terrible, our panel of experts find

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Some are flashy, some discuss hot-button issues like transit and budgeting, and some even come complete with theme music.

The websites in this year's municipal election campaign are almost as varied as the candidates themselves, but when the marks from three distinctly different voters asked to survey all the online offerings were tallied, incumbent Mayor Naheed Nenshi came out on top with an overall grade of A-

"I'm really happy to hear that," Nenshi said Thursday when informed of his victory of sorts. "Back in 2010, the website we used cost me a grand total of $35 and the blood and sweat of a couple of very dedicated campaign volunteers and me."

"And so what we wanted to do was be a little more sophisticated with our use of tools," Nenshi added. "We went to a new platform that allows us to manage the database and run the website."

But websites of quality in this campaign were few and far between, according to Mount Royal University political scientist Lori Williams. She and two others — website designer and founding director of Storm Division Inc. Simon House, and average voter Josephine Chloe Neumann — graded and offered feedback on 69 candidate websites.

But Williams said she expected better in many cases, especially among non-incumbents attempting to stand out in hotly contested areas like Ward 7.

"If you weren't able to make a forum or if you want more information, where are you going to go except the media or these websites?" Williams said. "It is potentially a really important source of information ... and some people didn't take it seriously. I mean the number of spelling and grammatical errors among people running for school board — you want to teach kids but you can't spell or write? It's just bizarre."

In other races, only one candidate — or none at all — bothered to set up a site. House also criticized campaigners who turned to free site builders and failed to purchase their own domain names. He said that too many of the designs were more suited to the mid-1990s.

"Everywhere else, people are upping their game, when it comes to — online retail, business and so on," he said. "I think when it comes to a political campaign, they should be upping their game too ... there should be time invested into it. You see all the effort that goes into the lawn signs, the flyers, the door-to-door — I got the impression that the website was the last thing on their minds."

Neumann, meanwhile, said prior to judging she'd paid no attention to the ongoing municipal campaign. Her first impression of many sites was that they looked and felt more like those run by car salesmen or photographers.

Metro averaged out the grades in each race to determine a winner. If Monday's ballot was based on web appeal alone, Naheed Nenshi, Shawn Ripley, Jim Stevenson, Gael MacLeod, Joe Connelly, Druh Farrell, Evan Woolley, Richard Wilkie, Andre Chabot, Shane Keating and Diane Colley-Urquhart would all sit on city council this term.

Social media just one tool in battle for voters

A highly acclaimed social media virtuoso, Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi is creeping upwards towards 140,000 Twitter followers.

That figure topples all his mayoral rivals combined — at least 50 times over.

However, political analyst David Taras offers some sobering insight on the inconsistency between social media popularity and political engagement.

"If it was just about counting tweets up in Calgary, Lady Gaga would be mayor," said Taras, the Ralph Klein Chair in Media Studies at Mount Royal University.

In fact, the music diva has more than 40.2 million users seeing her 140-character posts.

In terms of local politics, Taras identified a much smaller hodgepodge of angry, loyal or "super citizens" trolling social media sites.

"There's a reason they're on those sites," he said.

"But they're not the general public."

"They're far from the general public."

Nenshi's effective use of social media in the 2010 mayoral race has often been cited as a factor in his climb to the mayor's seat.

A consultant to one candidate in the last mayoral race, digital marketing strategist Ernest Barbaric also trumpeted Nenshi's social media prowess — especially on Twitter.

Barbaric maintained there's still room for all politicians to appeal to pockets of voters, such as small business owners, through social media sites such as LinkedIn, Facebook and YouTube — opposed to highly politically competitive circles on Twitter.

He suggested all politicians can step up their online game, citing a quality-versus-quantity appeal.

"The numbers aren't everything," Barbaric said. BRYAN WEISMILLER/METRO

Community input.
School faces $15-million funding gap if provincial grants remain flat

University of Calgary officials won't turn to growing marijuana or running their own photo radar to generate needed dough, but assured students and faculty alike Thursday they are looking in all corners of their campus for savings.

Those somewhat outlandish ideas and hundreds more — some of which appear more practical — were suggested by the university community through a crowd-sourcing website launched in the wake of a 7.3 per cent cut to provincial operating grants.

"We're respectful of ideas, but those would be, perhaps, not so feasible," President Elizabeth Cannon said Thursday of a campus-based drug operation or speeding enforcement team.

On a more serious note, the university has moved 69 of the ideas put forward into a "yes" pile and plan to study them further — officials said initial estimates suggest $10 million could be saved through those actions alone.

But Cannon conceded some of the brainwaves will take years to implement and others may never see the light of day. However, officials did highlight potential moves to trim administrative positions and introduce an early-retirement incentive package as items currently in the "yes" group.

The university is also establishing a committee to "re-imagine" its operations and it's expected the school's budget in April 2015 will look quite different from their current one.

Before that, however, officials must move to close a $15-million operational funding gap this year, a number that could change for better or worse if the province strays from its pledge of no change to operational funding in the 2014 budget.

Cannon said specific decisions on program offerings, enrolment and staffing will be left largely to "individual communities" on campus, but added they will be made under the guidelines of the school's Eyes High strategy, which aims to turn the university into a top-five research institution.

"It's about a community working together and being respectful of all the roles we have within the university community," she said.

But student representatives continued to express fears that more money would come out of their wallets to keep things running smoothly on campus.

"It seems anytime our institutions are scrambling for money students end up paying the cost," said Conner Brown, vice-president external with the U of C students' union.

U of C prez's travel costs decline, but critics remain

University of Calgary president Elizabeth Cannon METRO FILE

Locales like Edmonton, Israel and China have been on the University of Calgary president's travel itinerary this year, but her overall expenses are down.

Documents posted online as well as an estimated $10,800 to cover a trip for Elizabeth Cannon to China alongside Alberta Premier Alison Redford bring her total travel costs to $33,900 to September's end.

At this time last year, Cannon had racked up $68,000 in airfare, meals and accommodations while traveling around Canada and abroad. The release of expenses at that time came in response to a freedom of information request put forward by the Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF).

"As soon as you shine light on this, a lot of unnecessary spending will scatter like cockroaches," said the federation's Alberta director Derek Fildebrandt, offering his rationale of the drop in Cannon's travel costs.

He added that the U of C could still do more to communicate to the public what is actually gained from the president's excursions.

"Anyone in the private sector, in the not-for-profit sector, when they travel, are expected to justify what they've done," he said. "Just going because the premier's invited you isn't good enough."

Darlene Crowell, an associate vice-president in the university's strategic communications area, said in a statement that the school is committed to "fis-

Things just got personal. Ethics boss says it's OK to lobby for own interests

An Alberta government backbencher who lobbied bureaucrats and fellow politicians to make legislative changes to benefit his own company did nothing wrong, the province's ethics commissioner ruled Thursday.

Ethics commissioner Neil Wilkinson, in a written judgment, said that while Peter Sandhu wanted changes to lien rules to benefit his home-building company, it was not a conflict of interest because other home-building companies would have benefited as well.

"Sandhu's persistence in this matter created an appearance of conflict of interest, but did not amount to an improper use of his office," wrote Wilkinson in the judgment.

A spokesman for his constituency office said he would not be commenting Thursday, although Sandhu did take to Facebook and

Turning a blind eye

It must be a relief to not care that if the wrong people win on Monday, all the forward momentum that Calgary has been praised for around the world will be halted as we begin to revert back to the negative stereotypes we've all worked so hard to move on from.

I know that in this day and age there are more people voting for celebrity dancers than for politicians.

I guess that in itself is upsetting, but maybe it would be nice to not be stressed about the fact that, in the aforementioned video, Cal Wenzel implies that he and Ward 7 candidate Kevin Taylor know each other and it's not a coincidence that Taylor is desperately trying to take down density-friendly Druh Farrell for a second straight time.

Not caring about this year's election probably also means that you don't care that Sean Chu still hasn't released his list of donors and he, along with James Maxim, Joe Magliocca, and Ward Sutherland have all curiously said in one way or another that urban sprawl in Calgary isn't a problem.

And let's all just be honest with each other: Whether you support these so-called subsidies or not, there's no way that you can say that more urban sprawl is a good thing. Some people want you to believe this is a battle of urban versus suburban; to me, it's about making better use of the communities we've built.

I mean, at some point during your frustratingly long commute on the Deerfoot or Crowchild, don't you wish that it were somehow easier and faster to get from Point A to Point B?

But that's for someone who cares about voting to worry about, right?

As the election nears its final hours, I've become increasingly jealous of the people who haven't lost sleep over infuriating lies thrown around on message boards and Facebook pages.

It must be a relief to not care that if the wrong people win on Monday, all the forward momentum that Calgary has been praised for around the world will be halted as we begin to revert back to the negative stereotypes we've all worked so hard to move on from.

Seriously, it would be great to not care about the future of the city. But, for so many reasons, I still do.

So on Monday I'll be voting and then looking forward to the best sleep I've had in months.

Reminding riders about peace officer powers

Awareness campaign.

Calgary Transit peace officers carry batons, wear body armour and can make arrests

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Calgary Transit peace officers may be quicker to flash a smile than a badge, but make no mistake — they are full-fledged law-enforcement officials who can and will arrest you if necessary.

That was the message from Calgary Transit on Thursday, as it launched a new awareness campaign on the role its peace officers play and the authorities they carry under the law.

"Our folks are friendly, but they are not a security officer," said transit enforcement and public safety co-ordinator Brian Whitelaw. "They are, in fact, a law-enforcement official."

Peace officers carry pepper spray and batons and wear body armour, Whitelaw said, and they have the authority to make arrests. But some transit users don't seem to understand that.

"Some of the incidents that our officers get involved in, particularly where the use of force has been involved, often at the heart of the matter is that the person doesn't understand that the officer is a law-enforcement official," Whitelaw said. "We want people to understand that they do need to comply with the requests of the peace officer."

CBE. High school class sizes haven't changed much, survey shows

Reports from Calgary public high school principals suggest there are only a handful of classes per school with 40 or more students crammed in, a situation that hasn't changed much from last year, officials said Thursday.

The Calgary Board of Education published results of a survey that asked principals to conduct a head count of students and come up with an average class size, taking into account all optional and core-subject offerings.

Administrators were also asked to identify their largest class. But while some reported more than 70 students in a single room, officials said those were generally in specialty classes like band and work-experience offerings.

CBE area director Calvin Davies said in Area 4, which he oversees, there are some core classes with more than 40 kids inside, but added it would be no more than two to four per school.

"We would like to have class sizes that aren't that high in the academic area, but we have no choice in a lot of these circumstances," Davies said.

school classes came in direct contrast to the picture painted by the Alberta Teachers' Association — local president Frank Bruseker even suggested this week that terms set out in the instructor collective bargaining agreement were being violated because workplace demands are increasing.

On Thursday, both Bruseker and trustee Sheila Taylor said the data provided doesn't paint the whole picture. Taylor, specifically, said student-to-teacher in core subjects would serve as a better indicator of current conditions.

Private insurance. Ban being challenged in court

Alberta's ban on private insurance for medically necessary services is being challenged in a Calgary court.

The Justice Centre for Constitutional Freedoms is supporting two men who say they were forced to pay out-of-pocket to get health care they needed in the United States.

They say they couldn't get help in a timely fashion in Alberta's public system.

Dr. Darcy Allen and Richard Cross have filed separate applications in the Court of Queen's Bench that question whether the law is constitutional.

"Darcy Allen was deprived of his (Charter) Section 7 rights of security of person," said centre lawyer John Carpay.

He said Alberta's out-of-country health services committee also failed to reimburse Cross, who sought treatment for back pain in Arizona when no such treatment was available in Canada.

Flood-aid concert raised more than $2M

Final tally. Mayor says the concert did more than raise money; it proved city's resilience

More than $2 million were raised at a star-studded flood-benefit concert held at McMahon Stadium in August, organizers announced Thursday.

The proceeds from merchandise sales and other revenue will go to the Calgary Foundation's Flood Rebuilding Fund to assist southern Alberta communities swamped by June's historic flood.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi, who spoke at the concert and Thursday's announcement, lauded the spirit shown in the wake of the disaster.

"It's not just about the money," Nenshi said. "It's about coming together ... 32,000 people saying, 'We're back and we're strong,' and that's a pretty amazing thing.

"People are almost forgetting this is the costliest natural disaster in Canadian history because we managed to rebound so fast, and I think that says a lot of about who we are."

The concert lineup included such big-name Canadian acts as Matthew Good, Nickelback and Jann Arden. Tom Cochrane, Corb Lund and The Sheepdogs also performed.

Nov. 28. Calgary Zoo to reopen completely after brutal, costly flooding

The Calgary Zoo plans to welcome visitors to the entire park next month for the first time since it was heavily damaged by flooding.

The zoo says in a release that it will completely reopen on Nov. 28 with a big celebration.

The devastating floods that swamped much of downtown Calgary in June caused more than $50 million in building and infrastructure damage at the zoo.

The facility had to find new homes for dozens of animals, closed several buildings and laid off about 300 employees.

It managed to reopen the popular Penguin Plunge exhibit and two other displays on July 31 — about one third of the park.

Zoo CEO Clément Lanthier says he's proud of the rebuilding effort in such a short time.

"I have been anxiously anticipating the day when I could announce to our community that their Calgary Zoo is back," Lanthier said in the release Thursday.

The disaster has been hard on the facility's pocketbook: $160,000 a day in lost revenue. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woman charged in fatal hit-and-run

Police have laid charges against a woman over a fatal hit-and-run in south-east Calgary on Wednesday.

A 26-year-old man was killed after being struck by a vehicle in the 3100 block of 17th Avenue S.E. around 2:30 a.m. Wednesday, said police. Authorities said the driver fled but that they later found the vehicle and tracked it back to owner Julia Marie McMillan, 40, of Chestermere. METRO

Most councillor candidates support secondary suites

Public positions.

83% of candidates for city councillor have indicated strong or conditional support for secondary suites

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

It has come up time and time again during the campaign, an issue the incumbent mayor has tried to make a key election issue, and one that has repeatedly divided past city councils.

It's the legalization of secondary suites, and it will almost certainly come up again — likely in short order — once a new council is elected on Monday.

In order to give voters a clearer picture of where each candidate stands, Metro has compiled a nearly exhaustive list of their public statements on secondary suites from a combination of election forums, interviews, emails, and the assistance of a local real estate agent who has developed a website devoted to the issue.

Miki Somos launched secondariesuitescalgary.com in an attempt to pin down candidates' positions on an issue that's been personally important to him.

Analysis

In a Metro analysis of public statements from 46 of 48 candidates currently running in the city's 14 wards, 39 per cent indicated strong support for broadly legalizing secondary suites.

- 44 per cent indicated conditional support
- 17 indicated opposition.
- For a list of their names, visit metronews.ca

"My own parents are living in a basement suite with my sister," he said. "We sold two homes, and we were able to consolidate it into one, nice, high-end home."

Somos was involved in the secondary suite debate in Edmonton in the past and believes Calgary should get in line with the vast majority of Canadian municipalities and generally allow homeowners to build them.

"I think we should just have a right to choose what we want, as property owners," he said.

Of course, not everyone agrees. But, based on their public statements, the vast majority of candidates for city councillor appear at least open to the idea.

candidates currently running in the city's 14 wards, 39 per cent indicated strong support for broadly legalizing secondary suites, while 44 per cent indicated conditional support and just 17 indicated opposition.

Just two candidates didn't provide clear positions.

Ward 13 incumbent Diane Colley-Urquhart has voted against the legalization of secondary suites in the past, but said prior to the current election the matter needs more public consultation and she planned "to discuss this rigorously and vigorously" during the campaign.

Colley-Urquhart didn't reply to a request for an update on her position Thursday.

'Not much we can do' about sex offender: U.S. Police Authorities in Seattle have located a high-risk sex offender who recently fled Canada.

The Seattle Police Department says Michael Sean Stanley was found in downtown Seattle on Thursday and was ordered to register as a sex offender.

He wasn't arrested because Canadian authorities have declined to try to extradite him.

Stanley has a long history of sexual offences against women and children and had been missing since Oct. 1, when he left Edmonton and cut off his electronic-monitoring bracelet in Lloydminster, on the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary.

Edmonton police said they warned U.S. counterparts that he might try to cross the border, but U.S. officials allowed him in after determining he was an American citizen and not the subject of an extraditable arrest warrant.

"Law enforcement officials on both sides of the U.S. border are working to resolve this very complicated situation," Seattle police said in a message posted on the department's blotter.

"In the meantime, Seattle police have ordered Stanley to immediately register as a sex offender in Washington, which would bring him under law enforcement supervision."

On the weekend, Alberta Justice announced it would not seek Stanley's extradition to Canada because the breach of recognizance, mischief and driving charges he faces north of the border don't involve violence.

Alberta Justice acknowledged Stanley's violent record, but said the charges he is currently facing "do not typically warrant engaging the extradition process."

"If Michael Stanley returns to Canada, we are prepared to prosecute him and to ensure that he continues to be subject to an order to protect the public," the department said.

A spokeswoman with the Edmonton police said the developments in Seattle don't change the Edmonton department's handling of the case.

U.S. law enforcement officials have said they can't arrest Stanley unless he commits a crime. Dan Coon, a Washington State Patrol spokesman, said this week that Stanley would be treated just like any other person.

"Until he does something illegal, there's really not much we can do," Coon said. "I would just stay clear of him."

Vatican official fears pollution will limit access to Sistine Chapel

The head of the Vatican Museums warned Thursday he might be forced to limit the number of visitors to the Sistine Chapel if its new air conditioning and air purification systems don't significantly reduce "dangerous" pollution levels.

Antonio Paolucci told a conference that he was confident the new system, which is expected to be operational at the end of 2014, would curb the dust, humidity and carbon dioxide that are dulling and discolouring Michelangelo's frescoed masterpiece.

But he warned: "If this project doesn't work, I'll be forced to impose a limited number (of visitors)."

Graphic. The website won't remove the video, saying sharing it is meant to 'condemn it' and is therefore 'productive'

A graphic video of a beheading that has sparked outrage

Ancient skull tells the story of early human evolution

Discovery. Remains provide researchers with evidence of ancestors moving out of Africa and spreading north

The discovery of a 1.8-million-year-old skull of a human ancestor buried under a medieval Georgian village provides a picture of early evolution and indicates our family tree may have fewer branches than some believe, scientists say.

The fossil is the most complete pre-human skull uncovered. With other partial remains previously found at the rural site, it gives researchers the earliest evidence of human ancestors moving out of Africa and spreading north to the rest of the world, according to a study published Thursday in the journal Science.

A pre-human skull found in the ground at the medieval village of Dmanisi, Georgia, in 2005. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/GEORGIA NATIONAL MUSEUM

The skull and other remains offer a glimpse of a population of pre-humans of various sizes living at the same time — something that scientists had not seen before for such an ancient era. This diversity bolsters one of two competing theories about the way our early ancestors evolved, spreading out more like a tree than a bush.

When examined with the earlier Georgian finds, the skull “shows that this special immigration out of Africa happened much earlier than we thought and a much more primitive group did it,” said study lead author David Lordkipanidze, director of the Georgia National Museum.

Get your zzz's. Sleep helps to flush out cellular waste, says a new study

People who are sleep-deprived have trouble making decisions. ISTOCK

Here's a reason to get some shut-eye: A new study suggests our brains go on a cleaning spree during sleep, flushing out gunk that builds up while we're awake.

Though the cleaning was observed in mice, scientists think it happens in people too.

The findings were reported in Friday's issue of the journal Science and may provide new clues to treat Alzheimer's and other brain diseases.

People who are sleep-deprived have trouble learning and making decisions. But despite decades of research, scientists can't agree on the basic purpose of sleep.

For the study, researchers led by the University of Rochester Medical Center observed the brains of mice while awake and asleep. They found cellular waste flowed faster out of the brains of sleeping mice than awake mice. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ottawa moves to suspend scandal-tainted senators

Expenses. Duffy, Wallin and Brazeau could be stripped of pay, benefits

The Harper government moved Thursday to cauterize the bleeding from the ever-mushrooming Senate expenses scandal.

Claude Carignan, the government's leader in the Senate, introduced motions to suspend Mike Duffy, Pamela Wallin and Patrick Brazeau, three of four senators at the heart of the scandal. The motions would strip the trio of their pay, benefits and Senate resources.

News of the motions came just before government whip John Duncan announced in the House of Commons that Conservative MPs and senators will begin voluntarily disclosing greater details of their expenses.

The twin moves, coming on the first full day of the new parliamentary session, appeared aimed at quelling some of the raging Senate controversy that has engulfed the government for almost a full year.

But opposition parties signalled they won't let up on their relentless attacks on the government's ethics.

NDP ethics critic Charlie Angus won the support of other opposition parties Thursday for his bid to have a Commons committee determine whether Prime Minister Stephen Harper deliberately misled the Commons over the Senate expenses scandal or was deceived by his own staff.

Angus asked Commons Speaker Andrew Scheer to make a preliminary finding that Harper was in contempt of Parliament last spring when he repeatedly insisted no one in his office knew his chief of staff, Nigel Wright, had bailed out Duffy to the tune of $90,000 — an assurance since contradicted by the RCMP.

Angus then wants the matter referred to the procedure and House affairs committee to find out whether Harper intentionally misled the Commons or whether his staff didn't bother to fill him in on the facts.

Harper was not in the Commons on Thursday, having flown to Brussels to finalize a free trade agreement with the European Union.

The Senate motions, which will be voted on next week, say the suspensions are necessary to "protect the dignity and reputation of the Senate and the public's trust in Parliament" and refer to the senators' "gross negligence in the management" of parliamentary resources.

A fourth senator whose expenses are under RCMP investigation — former Liberal Mac Harb — has already resigned from the chamber.

"What do you call three senators suspended without pay? A good start," quipped NDP Leader Tom Mulcair, who is campaigning for outright abolition of the Senate.

"We'd suspend all of them without pay."

'All hell broke loose' in New Brunswick shale gas protest

Rising tensions.

RCMP say 40 people arrested after cop cars were set ablaze, Molotov cocktails thrown

The RCMP say dozens of people were arrested Thursday after Molotov cocktails were thrown at officers and police vehicles torched when they began enforcing an injunction to end an ongoing demonstration against shale gas exploration in eastern New Brunswick.

Const. Jullie Rogers-Marsh said at least five RCMP vehicles were destroyed after they were set ablaze and at least one shot was fired by someone other than a police officer at the site of the protest in Rexton.

tion. Those efforts have not been successful," Rogers-Marsh said. "Tensions were rising and serious criminal acts were and are being committed."

The Mounties said at least 40 people were arrested for firearms offences, threats, intimidation, mischief and violating the court-ordered injunction.

The RCMP began enforcing the injunction at around 7:30 a.m. to end the blockade of a compound where energy company SWN Resources stores exploration equipment.

The protesters, who include members of the Elsipogtog

First Nation, want SWN Resources to stop seismic testing and leave the province.

Robert Levi, a councillor with the Elsipogtog, said he went to the protest site early Thursday after hearing the RCMP had moved in to begin enforcing the injunction.

Levi said police pepper-sprayed dozens of people after 9:30 a.m. when he arrived with the chief and council.

"They sprayed the crowd that was there," he said in an interview. "The chief was manhandled a little bit and all hell broke loose."

Abominable Snowman just an old bear's tale?

Scientist's findings.

DNA testing suggests elusive Yeti could be a polar bear hybrid roaming the Himalayas

A British scientist says he may have solved the mystery of the Abominable Snowman — the elusive ape-like creature of the Himalayas. He thinks it's a bear.

DNA analysis conducted by Oxford University genetics professor Bryan Sykes suggests the creature, also known as the Yeti, is the descendant of an ancient polar bear.

Sykes compared DNA from hair samples taken from two Himalayan animals — identified by local people as Yetis

The myth will not die

Professor Bryan Sykes' findings are unlikely to lay the myth of the Yeti to rest.

- The Yeti or Abominable Snowman is one of a number of legendary ape-like beasts — along with Sasquatch and Bigfoot — reputed to live in heavily forested or snowy mountains.
- Scientists are skeptical, but decades of eyewitness reports, blurry photos and stories have kept the legend alive.

— to a database of animal genomes. He found they shared a genetic fingerprint with a polar bear jawbone found in the Norwegian Arctic that is at least 40,000 years old.

Sykes said Thursday that the tests showed the creatures were not related to modern Himalayan bears but were direct descendants of the prehistoric animal.

One of the samples he analyzed came from an alleged Yeti mummy in the Indian region of Ladakh, at the Western edge of the Himalayas, and was taken by a French mountaineer who was shown the corpse 40 years ago. The other was a single hair found a decade ago in Bhutan, 1,300 kilometres to the east.

Sykes said the fact the hair samples were found so far apart, and so recently, suggests the members of the species are still alive. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gory secret at lingerie store. Security guard finds a fetus in teen's bag

A security guard on the lookout for shoplifters searched two teenage girls as they left a Manhattan lingerie shop Thursday afternoon, and discovered one of them was carrying what appeared to be a fetus in her bag, police said.

Both girls are 17. One was hospitalized and the other was being questioned at a police precinct, authorities said. The medical examiner's office was performing an autopsy on the apparent human remains found inside the bag.

Victoria's Secret, where the girls were shopping, is owned by Columbus, Ohio-based Limited Brands. A spokeswoman for the company referred calls to the NYPD.

Police are also investigating whether the girls had actually stolen anything from the store, or whether they will face criminal charges.

An NYPD crime-scene unit van stationed at the store left a few hours after the incident after collecting bags of evidence. The store was open for

When did she give birth?

The girls were shopping at a Victoria's Secret lingerie store in midtown Manhattan, said police, who were called to the scene.

- Authorities are trying to determine if one girl gave birth in the store, or if she had been carrying the remains with her.
- She apparently told detectives she delivered a day earlier, but didn't know what to do with the remains, police said.

Ticking clock at work never sounded so good

Richard Doerner, museum specialist for the U.S. Senate Commission on Art, listens to the Ohio Clock as he restarts it outside the Senate chamber on Capitol Hill, Thursday. The clock stopped during the 16-day government shutdown because the workers that care for it were furloughed. Nationwide, from big-city office buildings to wilderness outposts, federal services shifted back into gear. "We'd hate to have to live through this all over again," said Richard Marcus, a 29-year employee of the National Archives in Washington. EVAN VUCCI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'Three specific things'

Obama lays out toned-down political agenda

Regrouping after a feud with Congress stalled his agenda, President Barack Obama is laying down a three-item to-do list for Congress that seems meagre when compared with the bold, progressive agenda he envisioned at the start of his second term.

But given the capital's partisanship, the complexities of the issues and the limited time left, even those items — immigration, farm legislation and a budget — amount to ambitious goals that will take political muscle, skill and ever-elusive compromise to execute.

"Those are three specific things that would make a huge difference in our economy right now," Obama said. "And we could get them done by the end of the year if our focus is on what's good for the American people."

Middle East. Birds suspected of being wired to spy on behalf of Israel

Israeli eagles dangerously endangered by pesticides, electrical wires and poachers now apparently face a new threat: Lebanese Hezbollah guerrillas.

Hezbollah's Al-Manar website recently boasted of capturing an eagle that carried an Israel-labelled transmission device on its back and claimed the bird was an Israeli spy. It said hunters in central Lebanon shot down the bird and found devices on it as well as a copper ring on its leg that reads "Israel" in English followed by letters that refer to Tel Aviv University. The fate of the eagle remains unclear.

Israeli ornithologist Yossi Leshem said Thursday he was tracking the bird for research and was "incredibly frustrated" it was harmed. Leshem, a Tel Aviv university professor, has specialized in the Bonelli's Eagle for decades and said they are in great peril with just nine pairs of mating age remaining in Holland. Demands for sensitivity changes to a Dutch children's festival

The Black Pete tradition in the Netherlands is under fire from opponents who believe the figure is a racist caricature and who asked Amsterdam officials Thursday to revoke the permit for a popular children's festival because of it.

Sinterklaas, the Dutch version of Santa Claus, is portrayed as a tall white man who arrives to great fanfare on Nov. 5, accompanied by dozens of clownish servants called Zwarte Pieten — Black Petes.

These are typically white people wearing blackface makeup with red lips and curly Afro wigs.

Festivities around the country last a month, culminating in a night of poems and gift-giving.

The tradition is an important part of Dutch culture, but in recent years there have been growing complaints that Pete is offensive.

Laos. No Canadians were on plane before crash

It now appears there were no Canadians on board the Lao Airlines passenger plane that crashed in Laos on Wednesday.

According to the airline, 44 passengers and five crew were on the flight — and a person who was originally listed as a Canadian has now been added to the list of Vietnamese nationals.

The ATR-72 turboprop plane crashed into the Mekong River as it prepared to land in stormy weather at Pakse Airport after a flight from the capital Vientiane.

As of Friday morning, only 17 bodies had been found, none of which could be immediately identified.

Officials in Laos said they lack the equipment and manpower to locate the fuselage and more bodies.

"If we could find (the plane) we would have found it already," an openly frustrated Transport Minister Sommad Pholsena told reporters. "We're working very hard."

Lao Airlines has said the plane ran into extremely bad weather as it prepared to land at Pakse Airport.

An international human rights group urged Egypt on Thursday to end its policy of unlawfully detaining Syrian refugees, including children, and forcibly returning them to their homeland, where civil war is raging. Amnesty International said that hundreds who have fled the bloodshed in Syria for sanctuary in Egypt — including many children without their parents — face prolonged detention in poor conditions or deportation, which has separated family members in some cases.

Spanish police arrest 17 suspects in jewelry heist

Spanish police have arrested 17 people for their role in stealing watches worth 23 million euros ($32 million), resolving one of the country's biggest jewelry heists, police say.

A police statement Thursday said the thieves used sophisticated laser equipment to break into a Madrid watch store in broad daylight in December 2012 and steal the watches without setting off alarms.

The gang then made contact with other criminal groups to off-load the watches on black markets in China. Police say they have managed to recover 300 of them.

Expulsions spark protest in Paris

France. Students tried to march to Interior Ministry, but were blocked by riot police with shields and helmets

Several hundred French teenagers erected barricades outside their schools and marched through Paris on Thursday to protest the police expulsions of immigrant families — including some of their classmates.

Police sprayed tear gas at a few students throwing projectiles but most marched peacefully, some climbing on bus shelters to shout demands for the interior minister's resignation.

Anger erupted this week over the treatment of a 15-year-old Kosovar girl who was detained in front of classmates on a field trip. The government says her eight-member family had been denied asylum and was no longer allowed to stay in France.

Such expulsions occur regularly around France as the government tries to limit illegal immigration. But the treatment of the girl touched a nerve, with critics saying police went too far and betrayed France's image as a champion of human rights.

The students, saying the expulsions are unfair to children, hope to pressure France's Socialist-led government to allow the girl and a recently expelled Armenian boy to return to France.

At one high school in Paris, students piled green garbage cans in front of the entrance and hung a banner saying "Education in Danger."

"Everybody should have a chance. Everybody should have a job, work and have a family. When children try to achieve that, France refuses, and that is not my country," said protester Romain Desprez.

The Kosovar girl, Leonarda Dibrani, told The Associated Press from the northern Kosovo city of Mitrovica that she wants to return to France. Activists say her family fled Kosovo about five years ago because they are Roma, or Gypsies, and faced discrimination and few opportunities.

"My home is in France," Dibrani said in French. "I don't speak the language here and I don't know anyone. I just want to go back to France and forget everything that happened."

The French government launched an investigation into her detention, and is expected to announce the results Friday.

Belal Uddin: Realizing dreams

For Metro

When you help others to realize their dreams you sometimes get to realize some of your own. At least that's what Belal Uddin, a volunteer at northeast Calgary's Centre for Newcomers, said he has discovered.

Uddin, born in Bangladesh and raised in Dubai, came to Canada with his mother to join his father in Calgary four years ago. He said his dreams include studying languages and helping other people.

Volunteering at the centre, a 25-year-old organization that provides new arrivals with the knowledge and tools they need to participate fully as citizens of Calgary and of Canada, is helping him realize both of these dreams.

"One of my dreams is to learn new languages," Uddin said.

He has continued to study

English, as well as Bengali, the language of his homeland, which he never learned as a child growing up in an English-speaking household.

Uddin said he is hoping he will be able to use his knowledge to help other newcomers.

"Lots of newcomers come with dreams. I want to help people have their dreams come true."

He has taken on a number of roles in his time at the centre, and now that experience is helping him write volunteer job descriptions so skills and interests of new volunteers are appropriately matched with available positions.

Estelita Novakovic, the centre's communications coordinator, said Uddin is simply a "super volunteer."

His own efforts and the people he has met at the centre have also helped Uddin open doors to his future.

After graduating from Crescent Heights High School,

Supporting others

"We're not here forever, just a few years. Why can we not support the other people?"

Belal Uddin

Uddin said he was done with studies. But a bad experience working at a fast food restaurant and encouragement from staff and volunteers at the centre helped him decide to go back to school.

"People here said if someone (else) can do it, you can do it. They pushed me," Uddin said. Now he is studying human resources through Athabasca University.

Regardless of where life takes him, helping others will likely be part of it.

"I believe we are all the same," he said. "We're not here forever, just a few years. Why can we not support the other people?"

Wages flat, costs up. Many Brits working, but still struggling to get by Having a job no longer offers a sure route out of poverty in Britain, with the working poor crushed by rising costs and stagnant wages, a first-of-its-kind report from the government said Thursday.

The Social Mobility and Child Poverty Commission report concluded that the government must do more to help low-paid workers. While government policies have traditionally focused on helping welfare recipients get work, the missing piece of the "policy jigsaw" is how to help people who are working but not economically stable, said Alan Milburn, the commission's chair.

"These are the people that heed the urgings of politicians of all hues to do the right thing, to stand on their own two feet, to strive not shirk," Milburn said.

"Yet all too often the working poor are the forgotten people of Britain. They desperately need a new deal."

The report concludes that 4.8 million workers, often women, earn less than a living wage.

Young people have been especially hard hit by deteriorating economic conditions. The report said that two-thirds of Britain's poor children now live in families with at least one working adult. In 1997, that was less than half.

Food bonds nations.

Strengthened ties mean Canadians will get access to more EU cheese, while our Euro brethren can nosh on more Canuck beef and pork

Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper headed to Brussels on Thursday to conclude a free trade deal with the European Union, as Canada seeks to diversify its trade away from the United States.

EU trade spokesman John Clancy said in an email that the European Union and Canada hope to conclude the free trade deal in the "coming days."

Harper posted on his official Twitter account that Canada will "soon" complete negotiations. His office said he will meet with the President of the European Commission, Jose Manuel Barroso.

Crisis averted

One thorny issue surrounding the deal was overcome Thursday when Canada announced it would lift visa requirements for Czech nationals.

Yves Leduc, director of international trade for the Dairy Farmers of Canada, said he's been told by a Canadian government official that an agreement in principle has been reached and that the European Union's 28 members and Canada's 10 provinces have to approve it.

Canada has agreed to permit a doubling of the EU quota on cheese exports to Canada in exchange for greater access for Canadian beef and pork producers. Leduc said Canada's cheese industry is angry because it threatens the fine cheese market in Canada.

ORR YOU COULD JUST BUY THE BOOK

1 Bobby Orr. In his new memoir, Orr, My Story, (it should have been called 'My St-ORR-y') the Boston Bruins Hall-of-Famer from Parry Sound, Ont., takes us inside what it was like to learn the game on the open ice of Georgian Bay, and about how to make hockey "fun" again for kids. One Orr story you won't hear in the book but I've heard a million times: My father-in-law lived on the same street as Orr when he played with the Oshawa Generals.

2 Tina & Amy. In an awesome coup, NBC locked in Tina Fey and Amy Poehler to be Golden Globe hosts for 2014 and 2015. Their 2013 co-hosting landed superlative reviews — and 19.7 million total viewers, a six-year high for the awards show. If I were NBC, I would have locked them in for 10 more years. But perhaps audiences are a little too fickle for that.

3 A world-famous double-double. A new survey of 70,000 consumers in 15 countries reveals that Disney is the world's most beloved brand, finishing ahead of others in the Top 10 like Yahoo, Google, Sony, Netflix, Whole Foods and Apple. Canada's iconic Tim Hortons finished No. 61 on the list, a sure sign it's becoming world famous. Someday, we'll be sipping double-doubles on Mars.

5 Movember. It's that time of year again to get creative and grow a mo for Movember, which raises so much money and awareness to combat prostate and testicular cancer and mental health challenges. Think about registering yourself as an individual or as part of a team at movember.com. I grew a mo for the first time last year, and will be working on a new one for this year!

6 Facebook friend for iPhone. I love the creativity in many Kijiji listings, and one of my faves was this recent Peterborough, Ont., listing:

"Wanted: Who has an iPhone they want to give me as a gift?" In return, the person offered to make a hat — yes, make a hat — and become a friend on Facebook. If they throw in a Twitter follow too, I'd consider.

7 BlackBerry. The troubled smartphone maker released an open letter You Can Continue To Count On BlackBerry ad campaign to its customers this week appealing for them to stick with the company through this tumultuous time of restructuring. I plan on sticking with them for now, right up until the last BBM contact I have is myself.

8 Twitter DM. Twitter has begun pushing out a feature update that lets you (if you check off the box) receive direct messages from any of your followers, regardless of whether you follow them or not. This private functionality is another step in Twitter becoming your new email inbox. Yes, more and more people, particularly tweens and teens, don't use traditional email.

9 Fifty Shades of Grey Vancouver. No I'm not talking about the weather. If you see more people reading Fifty Shades of Grey all of a sudden in Vancouver, maybe it's because the movie adaptation begins filming there early next month — Nov. 5 to be exact. If you spot any actors, Instagram them under the caption Before They Were Famous.

10 Drinkify. A neat website called drinkify.org tells you exactly what you should drink while listening to a specific artist. Should you be rocking out to, say, Kings of Leon at your next dinner party, type that band in on the site and Drinkify recommends "6 oz. Kirsch. Serve on rocks. Stir vigorously." If you're listening to John Tesh, well then ... sorry, I'm not typing that in for you.

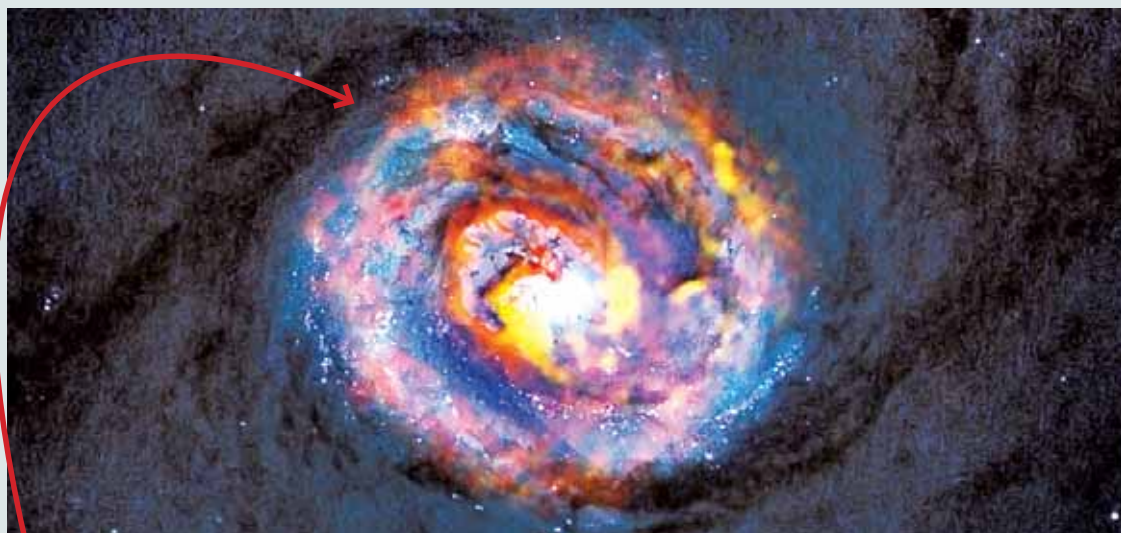

11 Piers Morgan. The outspoken host of the CNN show Piers Morgan Live has a new book out where he takes us behind the scenes of the drama of anchoring a nightly news show. If he thinks that's stressful, imagine being me doing weekly segments on local radio.

Synopsis

The newest adaptation of Stephen King's 1974 novel stars Chloë Grace Moretz as high school outcast Carrie White, a lonely girl teased by classmates and abused by her deeply religious mother (Julianne Moore). Despite the best efforts of gym teacher Miss Desjardin (Judy Greer) to help Carrie fit in, a clique of mean girls led by Chris (Portia Doubleday) make it their mission to ensure that Carrie has a rough time at school. After being humiliated at her senior prom — pig's blood will really ruin a taffeta dress, apparently — she unleashes a terrible telekinetic vengeance on those who wronged her.

Chloë Grace Moretz does an admirable job as Carrie, but no one can hold a candle to Sissy Spacek's iconic portrayal of the telekinetic teen. CONTRIBUTED

Wary of another Carrie

Weak remake. There's really no reason to toy with a classic — even if the cast includes Chloë Grace Moretz and Julianne Moore

Richard: Mark, people have been asking me about this movie for months. But they haven't been asking, "Is it good?" They've been asking me why anyone would remake the 1976 classic. After seeing it, I'm not sure. The new version is a perfectly serviceable adaptation of Stephen King's famous book but it doesn't have the vulnerability or frailty that made Sissy Spacek so memorable in the title role. First off, what did you think of Chloë Grace Moretz?

Mark: Richard, she's the strongest thing in the movie. Although no one can compare to Sissy Spacek, she did an admirable job. The question isn't whether this is a good film; it's whether this is a necessary film. When I heard Kimberly Pierce would be directing this remake, I hoped she would bring some kind of post-feminist twist to it. But no, she didn't direct the remake; she just coloured within the lines.

RC: Agreed, but there are some good moments within those lines. There is a sweetness to Carrie, particularly in the prom scenes (pre-pig's blood) that makes the anticipation of what is to come all the more tense. I liked Julianne Moore's head thumping self-punishment scenes. It works in those moments, but there's too much CGI — the floating books are silly — and since when can Carrie fly?

MB: She can now! It's just another example how everything in the movie is less subtle than in the Brian De Palma version. The themes of religious and sexual repression — so shocking in 1976 — seem overcooked now. But let's pretend we know nothing of the original. Does the movie work? Sure, to an extent. The performances are good, the last third is exciting and full of blood and revenge, but it still feels a bit superficial and detached. None of my fingernails were harmed in the viewing of this production.

RC: Mine either, although a mother and daughter knife battle made me shift to the front of my seat mostly because it felt more organic and less computer generated than some of the other displays of Carrie's mad telekinetic skills. It felt dangerous in a way that the rest of the violence didn't.

MB: And Julianne Moore does crazy very well, doesn't she? Still, the script gave her some passages so clunky that even real-life maniac mamas would have demanded another draft.

The man behind the Jason mask

Kane Hodder. After a burn accident early in life, actor and stuntman tries to help other burn victims

SCOTT KEARNAN
Metro World News in Boston

Attention, Friday the 13th film fans: Jason Voorhees has a heart. (And we don't mean the one impaled on his machete.) As the famous horror franchise's hockey-masked killer and uber-'80s icon, stuntman and actor Kane Hodder has claimed a lot of nubile, teenage victims. But off-camera, the scary movie star is more interested in helping survivors.

Early in his stunt career, Hodder received nearly fatal burns over 50 per cent of his body. So today he raises funds for burn survivors through the "I Helped Kane" program of Scars That Care (scarsthatcare.org), a nonprofit that mobilizes the horror flick community. And whenever the movie convention regular visits a major city, he visits hospital burn units to offer support and understanding to survivors, including the inevitably encountered super-fan of his frightening alter ego.

We grabbed a few minutes with the Crystal Lake killer to talk about the films, fire stunts and why his sons are chips off the Friday chopping block.

Kane Hodder says his accident didn't throw him off stunts. CONTRIBUTED

Why do you make a point of visiting hospitals when you're touring?

I was seriously burned 35 years ago. It's an injury where, unless you've been through it, you really have no idea what it's like. Sometimes you get so down and negative in the burn unit; talking to someone who has been there can really help. I was visited myself by a stuntman, Chuck Couch; he didn't know who I was. I had been in the business for barely six months. But it meant a lot. If I can ever help someone like that, I want to. I was in the hospital for over five months, and for the first four I wasn't in a burn unit. It's critical to be in a quality burn unit — and Mass General (Massachusetts General Hospital) has one of the best in the United States.

How did that delay impact your recovery?

Things got progressively worse, not better. I was in so much pain, I got a staph infection throughout the burn area, and the doctor told my family I might die. He was egotistical, and thought he could handle my situation. Many years later, after I realized he f— me over and made me suffer because he was inept, I went to his office. I honestly wasn't sure what I was going to do when I got face to face with him. I probably could have beaten him to death; I had so much hatred for this guy. But he looked me in the eye and admitted that (he) had been wrong. It caught me off guard. It defused my anger. I walked out. Though I sometimes think that (anger) might be why I'm able to be so convincing with extreme violence on film. I think maybe I draw from my own past.

Did the experience put you off of stunts? Does anything scare you?

It never dissuaded me. Maybe it was my ego, not wanting to be defeated by a certain type, but I ended up specializing in fire stunts. There's really nothing in life that scares me! Maybe because I've been through the worst hell I could ever imagine.

But I've never been afraid of anything, not typical phobias anyway.

Jason may haunt your dreams, but Kane Hodder is actually a pretty nice guy. GETTY IMAGES

Escape Plan

Director. Mikael Hafstrom

Stars. Sylvester Stallone, Arnold Schwarzenegger

Feeling like an unearthed relic from the VHS era, the endearingly junky Escape Plan's selling point is a long-awaited pairing of two movie icons: We finally get to see Amy Ryan and Curtis "50 Cent" Jackson sharing scenes together. Oh, and it's also got Sylvester and Arnold. Cheerfully preposterous and proudly low-rent, director Mikael Hafstrom's meat-and-potatoes throwback coasts on the chemistry of its co-stars. Escape Plan plays like comfort food for men of a certain age and temperament.

The Fifth Estate

Director. Bill Condon

Stars. Benedict Cumberbatch

The Fifth Estate details the breathless years leading up to WikiLeaks's biggest leak — the release of the "Collateral Murder video" which showed Iraqi journalists killed by an AH-64 Apache helicopter. Wiki honcho Julian Assange (Benedict Cumberbatch) is one of the more controversial figures of recent history. Is he a journalist? A hacker with an anti-establishment ideology? Or a war criminal with blood on his hands? The movie presents all possibilities, but can't seem to decide on one point of view.

Crystal Fairy

Director. Sebastian Silva

Stars. Michael Cera, Gaby Hoffman

There isn't much to be gleaned from Crystal Fairy unless you're entranced by Michael Cera playing a caustic, compulsive jerk. Set in Chile, the drug-fixated tourist sets out with an American hippie and three locals to find a famed cactus in order to experience a hallucinogenic trip in the desert. And that's about it. Crystal Fairy is neither all that funny nor insightful and if not for some decent heavily-improvised performances, it wouldn't be worth the trip at all.

Cammie is type-A, even in the most relaxed settings. So when she discovers a ring in her schlubby, yet malleable boyfriend Todd's things, their weekend in cottage country takes on new importance. Her dream of a perfect proposal is ruined when Todd's deadbeat brother shows up unannounced. Frustration quickly turns to violence as the couple is slowly buried in a web of lies. Intended to be a clever skewering of materialistic pursuits, director Peter Wellington can't get the tone right.

IAN GORMELY

Enemies no more. Now that Arnie is his pal, Sly no longer walks Stallone

These two action stars should've bonded over muscles and mayhem in the '80s, but they were fierce rivals instead. GETTY IMAGES

How sad. Two of the biggest musclemen of the '80s apparently never got to bond at the time over how much iron they could pump, because they loathed each other.

Sylvester Stallone revealed at the premiere of his new movie Escape Plan that he and his costar Arnold Schwarzenegger "really disliked each other intensely for 20 years," according to Page Six.

What drove a wedge between two men who had so much in common (thick necks, incomprehensible accents)?

Sly implies it was professional rivalry — which may have been good for both of their careers.

"It goes to show you, a good enemy is hard to find. Eventually you sort of appreciate [them]. Maybe the reason we were so competitive was it made us get to where we are?"

Maybe! In any case, the two are apparently buds now, in a way that sounds indistinguishable from hatred. Stallone says he "pranked" his costar by reporting him to NASA as a security threat so he'd get strip searched.

Aww! Friendship, or something.

METRO

The Running Man

Death: Buzzsaw to crotch.

Stuck in a violent reality show, Arnold Schwarzenegger is forced to kill, turning a guy named Buzzsaw's buzzsaw against him.

Killer catchphrase: "This saw is part of me. And I'm going to make it part of you," the late Buzzsaw said.

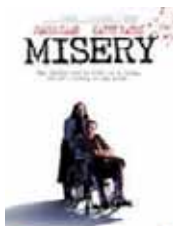

Misery

Death: Head trauma from pig.

Finally free after being kidnapped by "biggest fan" Annie, disabled author Paul jabs her eyes out, feeds her a burned book and, finally, bashes her head in with a cast-iron pig.

Killer catchphrase: "Eat it till you choke, you sick, twisted f—," Paul said to Annie.

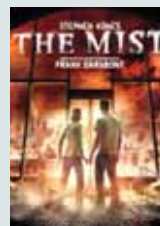

The Mist

Death: Squeezed by tentacle.

After running away a lot from ... a mist, our heroes finally meet an alien octopus in a grocery store. It rips the chest off a stockboy and drags him into, well, the mist.

Killer catchphrase: "Oh s—, oh s—, oh s—," said by a guy in the store.

Thinner

Death: Murdered by strawberry pie.

Cursed by a gypsy, a fat lawyer loses weight, and his sanity, feeding his wife a cursed pie. The next morning, he wakes up beside her cursed corpse.

Killer catchphrase: "Is it strawberry? My favourite," says the lawyer's wife.

Creepshow 2

Death: Eaten by an oil slick.

...on a lake, while high. Don't do drugs, kids.

Killer catchphrase: "It ate Rachel. It f—' ate her up. What is this thing?" said by a high kid.

Maximum Overdrive

Death: Killed by soda machine.

In a world where machines are evil, avoid the vending machine. It spits out cans real fast. Right into a baseball coach's head.

Killer catchphrase: "Huh?" said by the coach right before a soda can hits him in the nuts.

Pet Sematary

Death: Sliced, diced and chewed by zombie child

Back from the dead, little boy Gage attacks his elderly neighbour with a scalpel — slicing his heel, then his cheeks, before biting into his neck.

Killer catchphrase: "Come play with me daddy," said by the zombie child.

Carrie

Death: Burned by electrocution and fire.

Drenched in pig's blood after a prank at the school dance, vulnerable student Carrie uses telekinesis to lock the doors and set the place ablaze.

Killer catchphrase: "They're all gonna laugh at you," Carrie's mom said in a voice-over

Sleepwalkers

Death: Stabbed by corncob.

In a movie about mother-and-son incestuous vampires who turn into bipedal werewolves, a woman stabbing a sheriff in the back with a corncob makes perfect sense.

Killer catchphrase: "No vegetables. No dessert," said by the crazy werewolf mom.

Dreamcatcher

Death: Pooped out worm.

A big worm too. And it's an alien. The cast find themselves in very deep doo-doo.

Killer catchphrase: "What...do you want?" said the guy from Homeland.

Want to be sensual? Use the power of now

Twelve Years a Slave.

Actress Lupita Nyong'o took a page from James Baldwin's The Fire Next Time to help her with role

Metro World News in Hollywood

Lupita Nyong'o is hitting the ground running when it comes to her film career, making a startling and attention-grabbing debut as the mysterious, wild-eyed Patsy in Twelve Years a Slave, a performance that's already earning a ton of awards speculation for the Nigerian actress.

There are worse ways to start a film career.

When you get a shot at a role like this in a film like this with a director like this, what's your first reaction?

When I auditioned for this role, I was just about to graduate from Yale. It was the first time that I was allowed to audition for professional things, and Twelve Years a Slave was the first audition I put on tape. After the audition it dawned on me — Brad Pitt is producing this film and Steve McQueen. ... It was kind of like a slow realization of how major auditioning for this thing was, but it also felt completely improbable that I would get the role.

Twelve Years a Slave opens Friday. CONTRIBUTED

How do you approach material as intense and visceral as this?

It was about being present. Patsy in the script is described as being "effortlessly sensual." In the book, Solomon says that Patsy "had an air of loftiness that neither labour nor lash could rid her of." I was reading James Baldwin's The Fire Next Time, and I found this thing he says about sensuality. He says, "To be sensual, I think, is to rejoice in the force of life itself and to be present in everything that one does, from the effort of loving to the breaking of bread." And that was Patsy for me. That's what made her so sensual, the fact that she was present. And she's present because she has this volatile master. She never knows what he's going to do next — what he's going to require or inflict. So that was the lesson I took going in. I just need to be there. The humiliation and the heartbreak that I've been living, experiencing, will reveal itself.

Why do you think it took so many non-Americans to give such an honest look at such a horrific part of American history?

I don't think it was by design. I don't think Steve was like, "I don't want any Americans!" I don't think that's the case. I don't think it's by design, but at the same time America is made of immigrants. The African-American slaves came from Africa, the white slave owners were Irish and German and English. So I don't think that highlighting our non-American-ness does the story any sort of favours or injustice. For me, as an actor, I feel like it is my job to portray things that are outside of myself; to truthfully believe in circumstances that are not my own. Otherwise my career will be very short, playing some middle-class Kenyan.

File this week's tracks under Numanoid, True Blood moonlighting and sinister incantations

I Am Dust/ Gary Numan

While he'll forever be remembered for songs like Cars, this track from his new Splinter album will explain why guys like Trent Reznor still love him.

Free Your Mind/Cut Copy

Australia's Cut Copy got True Blood star Alexander Skarsgård to appear as a creepy half-naked baptizer in this Primal Scream-like single.

The Call of the First Aethyr/ Aleister Crowley

Back in the early 1900s, the infamous spiritualist recorded a series of incantations as wax recordings. They're now being reissued on vinyl just in time for Halloween. Be careful.

The Tenors. Win a chance to see the group perform in Vancouver

The Tenors have teamed up with Big Brothers Big Sisters. GETTY IMAGES

Want to see The Tenors live? Metro is giving you the chance to see the Canadian group perform in Vancouver. The contest comes as the musical foursome has teamed up with Big Brothers Big Sisters of Canada to record the single I Thank You, with 50 cents of each digital song download going to support the organization.

Big Brothers Big Sisters

highlights the importance of mentors in a child's life by providing volunteer opportunities to adults to be a friend and positive role model to Canada's youth.

Cyndi Lauper still her Unusual self after 30 years

Still having fun. The Girls Just Wanna Have Fun singer talks about recording her first album and how her breakout hit almost wasn't even hers

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

To celebrate the 30th anniversary of her breakthrough solo debut, Cyndi Lauper is not only performing She's so Unusual in its entirety, but she's also sharing stories that may make listeners exclaim that title phrase.

"When I recorded She Bop I wanted the producers to run a wire from the control booth to the rehearsal room where Kiss had their stuff," she remembers. "I felt comfortable enough to sing freely because I was uninhibited and nobody was watching. ... So I wound up actually taking my shirt off to feel free, which is hard to explain to a man, because you grow up and you take your shirt off whenever you want and women can't so that freedom you never feel as an adult."

The story even gets a little more unusual.

"Actually, I tickled myself to make myself laugh," Lauper reveals with an echo of the laugh that's captured in the song.

"I mean it was so ridiculous I just started laughing. So that is the laugh on the song

"I felt comfortable enough to sing freely because I was uninhibited. ... So I wound up actually taking my shirt off to feel free."

and then of course as soon as that album became popular and She Bop became popular then all of a sudden there's a lot of people laughing on their albums and I always used to think to myself, 'Well I know what I was doing, but what were they doing?'"

But what is probably most unusual about Lauper doing an Unusual tour at this point in her career is that she has achieved so much recently by looking forward.

She wrote the lyrics and music for the Broadway smash Kinky Boots, which won six Tony awards this year.

"With the success of the show on Broadway and the Tonys I feel like people actually do want to hear my new music, and I have a venue for it, so it doesn't feel like an oldies show that I have to do," she says.

"This is the first time I've done anything like this and it will probably be the last. It's an interesting journey for me to look back."

Girls Just Wanna Have Fun was originally written and sung by a man, Robert Hazard, and the message of the song was quite misogynistic.

"I said, 'The way Robert recorded this, it's not gonna work,'" Lauper recalls telling her producer. "And he looked at me and said, 'Well, think of what it could mean. It could be an anthem.'"

Idris Elba. ALL IMAGES GETTY

Between me, you and the world, I've tried every drug there is, says candid Elba

Idris Elba isn't shy about his personal history with drugs, telling Playboy it's quite extensive. "I'm not going to lie — I've tried everything, just between you, me and the people who read this magazine," he says. "I've tried it all. I played one of the biggest drug dealers in the world on TV (on The Wire), so you think I'd know what I was talking about."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Nice try Elle, next time let Melissa show some skin!

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Oh! Hey! Elle put an overweight woman on their cover — the fantastically amazing Melissa McCarthy. Kudos to them! But sadly, they also covered her up so much on their annual

Women in Hollywood issue that it looks like she's wearing a sleeping bag. Think about it — they would have never let Sandra Bullock not show any skin. So, the public outcry has begun! But not without Elle defending their choice to style McCarthy in a Marina Rinaldi coat. "On all of our shoots, our stylists work with the stars to choose pieces they feel good in, and this is no different: Melissa loved this look, and is gorgeous on our cover," a spokesperson for Elle said in a statement. "We are thrilled to honour her as one of our Women in Hollywood this year."

Taylor Swift

The truth is Styles was Swift's silver medal

Taylor Swift famously dated and split from One Direction star Harry Styles, inspiring the tune I Knew You Were Trouble, but according to a new report Styles was actually her back-up target within the popular boy band.

"Taylor had her eye on Zayn Malik," a source tells Life & Style magazine. "When Zayn found out she was interested, he turned her down. That's when she swooped in on Harry."

Tex Mex Stuffed Potato Skins

Baked potatoes are a nutritious way to eat the vegetable. Removing the pulp and filling them with a Tex Mex bean and vegetable stuffing as well as some melted cheese creates a great vegetarian meal. You can also add some cooked ground beef or diced cooked chicken if you'd like.

Part of this dish can be prepared ahead by baking the potatoes up to a day in advance. All you have to do is complete the recipe just before serving.

1. Preheat the oven to 450 F.
2. Wrap the potatoes in foil and bake directly on the oven rack for 45 to 50 minutes. Alternatively, prick each potato with a fork several times and microwave on High for 10 minutes or until soft.
3. When the potatoes are cool enough to handle, carefully scoop out the flesh, leaving about 1/4 inch of potato and the skin intact.

Ingredients

Prep time: 10 minutes
Bake time: 60 minutes

- 4 russet potatoes
- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- 1 cup diced onion
- 1/2 cup diced red bell pepper
- 2 tsp finely chopped jalapeno pepper

Nutritional analysis

Per serving:

- Calories: 317
- Protein: 11 g
- Fibre: 8.9 g
- Total fat: 11 g
- Cholesterol: 24 mg
- Sodium: 375 mg

Save the potato flesh for another purpose.

4. Lightly coat a small skillet with cooking spray, add the oil and set over medium heat. Add the onion and sauté for 5 minutes. Add the red pepper, jalapeno and garlic, and sauté for 3 minutes or just until soft. Transfer to a large mixing bowl.

5. Add the black beans, salsa, green onions and cilantro, and stir to combine. Fill the potato skins with the bean filling and sprinkle with the cheese. Bake for 10 minutes or just until heated through and the cheese is melted. Serve with sour cream.

Islanders shake off 2 quick goals by Oilers' Hall

John Tavares netted the go-ahead goal late in the second period, and the New York Islanders overcame a quick scoring spurt by Edmonton's Taylor Hall in a 3-2 victory over the Oilers on Thursday night.

Tavares beat goalie Devan Dubnyk with a snap shot in front with 1:07 left in the second off a pass from Kyle Okposo. It was the fourth goal of the season for the Islanders captain.

Okposo had scored his second of the season during a power play at 4:54 of the second to make it 2-2. Josh Bailey put New York ahead 1-0 in the first before Hall struck.

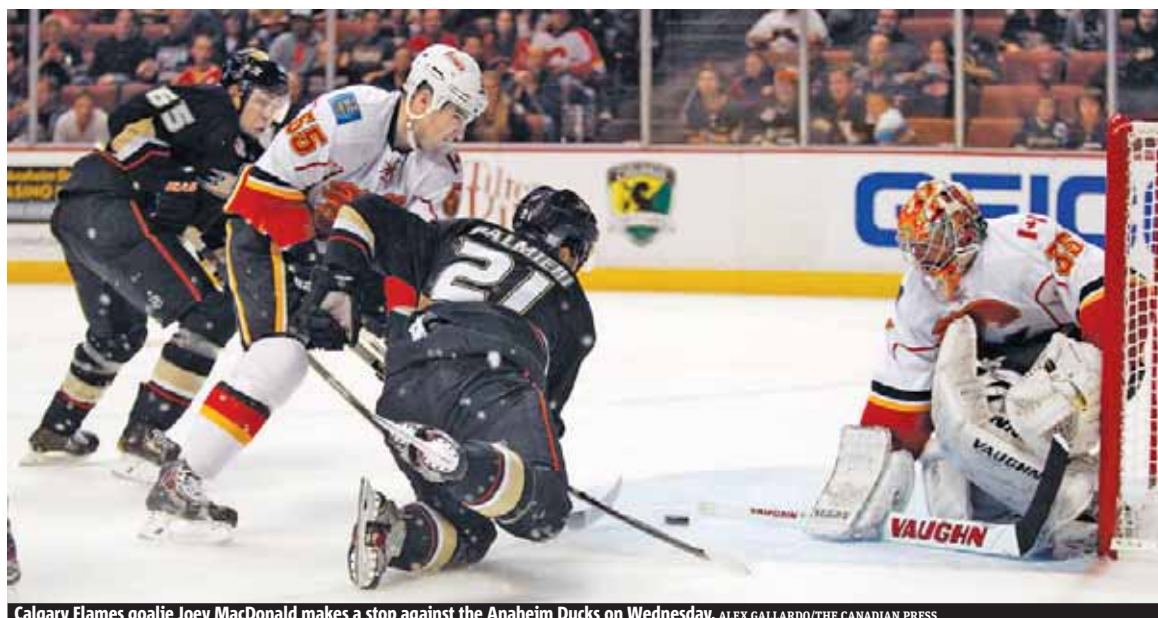

Hall gave the Oilers a 2-1 lead when he scored a pair of goals just eight seconds apart in the first. That broke the club mark of nine seconds, set by Wayne Gretzky on Feb. 18, 1981.

Tavares, who assisted on Okposo's goal, has points in six straight games. New York (3-2-2) has played six one-goal games this season.

The Islanders, 2-0-2 at home, surrendered late tying goals to Columbus and Buffalo before losing in shootouts at Nassau Coliseum.

The struggling Oilers fell to 1-6-1. Their lone win was a 5-4 shootout home victory over New Jersey on Oct. 7.

Edmonton has had its struggles on Long Island, too. This was the Oilers' seventh straight road loss to the Islanders and their ninth in 12 overall meetings with New York. They haven't beaten the Islanders on the road since Dec. 14, 1999. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ramo a no-go in last 3 at home ... why?

THE HOCKEY NEWS
Brian Costello
calgary@metronews.ca

By all accounts, Joey MacDonald is a great guy. He has a good disposition, is a positive influence in the dressing room and his smile is infectious. He just isn't a No. 1 goalie.

The fact he has started five consecutive games while the projected No. 1 Karri Ramo has sat is stunning. I'm at a loss as to why.

Sixteen days, at least, will have passed between when Ramo opened the season and played OK in a loss in Washington and when he might play again. In the five games in between, MacDonald has been both good and OK. Ramo is the heir apparent to Miikka Kiprusoff and is being paid handsomely ($2.75 million) even though he's unproven.

That's why it's mystifying that coach Bob Hartley chose none of three consecutive home games recently to allow Ramo to showcase himself to his new hometown team. It's not how the corporate marketing geniuses would have drawn things up a few months ago.

Ramo's indoctrination as an NHL goalie from 2007 to 2009 with Tampa Bay didn't go well. But after four years building his confidence and save percentage in the KHL, he was ready to try again at 27. It doesn't make sense then to put what might be fragile confidence on ice, waiting and wondering.

Ramo will get a start or two in the four remaining games on the road trip, probably as soon as Saturday. If he plays well, I'll call Hartley astute and more in touch with Ramo's psyche than what we see as outsiders.

If Ramo struggles, I'd understand.

It's only human nature for us to respond with a certain amount of trepidation and anxiety because the wait has been so long, with pressure mounting.

Heaven forbid the latter happens. The team has a lot invested in Ramo and so much about success in today's NHL comes down to above-average goaltending.

But at least Hartley has MacDonald in place. At 33 and with 127 NHL games under his belt, Joey Mac has proven for most of the past decade that he can be somewhere between reliable backup and solid third-stringer. The one year MacDonald stepped in the No. 1/co-No. 1 role was when Rick DiPietro was sidelined on Long Island. Yann Danis and MacDonald did relatively OK in a tough situation.

The Islanders finished 30th overall that year and drafted John Tavares first overall.

Last 3 games are crucial: Esks QB

Mike Reilly has been one of the few positives in what is one of the worst seasons in Edmonton Eskimos history, yet the 27-year-old says the team's final three games are crucial for the future of the franchise, the team and for himself.

With games remaining against three western rivals, beginning Friday evening at home against the Calgary Stampeders, the Eskimos designated quarterback of the future says it's critical the team does not "roll over and die."

"It's important we compete and get some wins," he said. "It's tough to not fall into that mentality of things are lost and to hang your head. It's like when a game is over and you've lost, you have to flush it and not dwell on it. Yeah we haven't had much success. But if we dwell on that we're never going to get better."

Reilly, who has started every game this season, says the 3-12 Eskimos have to treat the remaining games as playoffs "and try to get as hyped up for them as we can."

"Treat them as the most important games of the season because honestly, for the future of this franchise, for the future of this team, we need to approach it like that. We need to have success these next three games to give everybody something to get excited about for next year."

The native of Kennewick, Wash., vows he'll personally be fighting every down until the end of the season because his job, like everyone else's on the team, is on the line.

Speedskating toward an Olympic comeback

Road to Russia. Red Deer native's goal is to 'build and build towards the Olympics' after coming out of retirement in June Jeremy Wotherspoon remains committed to an Olympic comeback in speedskating despite a setback.

The four-time Olympian from Red Deer missed qualifying for Canada's World Cup team in the 500 metres Thursday

In his first races since the 2010 Olympic Games in Vancouver, Wotherspoon needed a top-five result at trials to represent Canada in World Cup races this fall, but he finished 11th.

The 36-year-old will race the 1,000 metres at the Olympic Oval on Friday, but the 500 metres is his specialty. Wotherspoon still holds the world record of 34.03 seconds set in Salt Lake City in 2007.

The Olympic trials for Canada's long-track speedskating team are Dec. 28 to Jan. 3. Wotherspoon believes that's enough time to get his race legs back and compete for a medal at the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi, Russia.

"As much as I'd like to do 500-metre World Cups, it's not my main goal," he said. "My goal is to build and build towards the Olympics."

"I know there's still a couple of months before the Olympics trials. After that, there's a month and a half before the Olympics so, it'll come quick, but it's still a lot of days for me to focus and lot of days for me to build up to that competition."

Wotherspoon announced in June he was coming out of retirement for another shot at Olympic glory.

He's earned more World Cup medals than any other man with a career 67. Wotherspoon won three 500-metre world titles and another in the 1,000, plus four world sprint championships during a career that spanned a decade and a half. He was inducted into Canada's Sports Hall of Fame last year.

Wotherspoon's Olympic silver medal in the 500 metres in 1998 is overshadowed by an absence of medals at three subsequent Winter Games.

Dos Santos sequel unlikely after Saturday: Velasquez

UFC 166. Heavyweight champion says three bouts could be enough to settle the score

UFC heavyweight champion Cain Velasquez and Junior Dos Santos will meet for the final fight in their heavyweight trilogy Saturday night in UFC 166.

And whatever the outcome, Velasquez says he won't fight Dos Santos again — at least not anytime soon.

Velasquez says: "I think it will be settled for a while."

Velasquez reclaimed the belt from Dos Santos with a decisive unanimous decision in UFC 155 in December. Dos Santos took the title from Velasquez in the first meeting in November 2011 with a knockout in 64 seconds.

UFC heavyweight champion Cain Velasquez THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dos Santos says he made a lot of mistakes in the last fight and that he used those to learn from as he prepared for Saturday's bout.

"The past fights are going to help me a lot because I learned from that," Dos Santos said. "I think the biggest challenge is going to be to stop him. He walks forward all the time and we have to take care of that."

Velasquez is looking to guard against Dos Santos landing that one big punch because he believes that's the only way Dos Santos can win. Seven of Dos Santos's victories in the UFC have come by knockout, which is tied for second-most in heavyweight history.

The Brazilian-born Dos Santos is a big fan of boxing and hopes Saturday's fight helps this trilogy live up to some of the fabled trilogies in boxing history. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Women's hockey

Canadians get boost in Boisbriand, Que.

Charline Labonte couldn't have asked for a better homecoming.

The Boisbriand, Que., native got the start in net in her hometown on Thursday night, where the Canadian women's hockey team defeated the United States 6-3 in pre-Olympic action.

"It's incredible," said Labonte. "I couldn't have asked for more. To bring the Canadian team here against the Americans I knew people would answer the call. We immediately felt their support."

"I couldn't have asked for anything better. It was worthy of Boisbriand."

Labonte allowed three goals on 24 shots on the night.

The game was the second of six encounters between the teams before the start of the Olympic Games in Sochi in February.

You will gain in some way today, maybe financially. However, the eclipse warns that what you get may be transitory in nature, so don't get too attached to it. If it's easy come it could also be easy go.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You won't be short of ideas or self-belief today. You may, however, be short of the kind of foresight that can save you from making a wrong turn. Make a point of looking ahead.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Employers could give you grief today, especially if they sense that you are none too sure of yourself. Visualize yourself as strong and capable. It may be an act but you can pull it off.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You have wasted too much time and energy on someone who is clearly not going to play ball, so cut them out of your life completely. That may seem a harsh but it's all or nothing.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Make a serious effort to resolve any differences of opinion you may have with colleagues. Not only will it make life easier for you on a day-to-day basis but it could also have some very welcome financial results.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

The lunar eclipse in your opposite sign will bring an edge to partnerships and you may want nothing more than to get away from awkward people for a while. So what's stopping you? Just go.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

For some strange reason you see plots and conspiracies wherever you look at the moment but are any of them likely to be real? No they aren't.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Today's eclipse won't mess things up for you as much as it does for others but you need to take care. Above all, don't get emotional about issues that are of little importance in the greater scheme of things.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

The quicker you come to a decision about some kind of domestic matter, the more likely it is to be wrong. To be blunt, your senses, including your sixth, are all over the place at the moment so hold fire.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You know where you want to be but you can't work out how you are going to get there from where you are now. Once today's eclipse begins to wane the way ahead will be clear.

Pisces

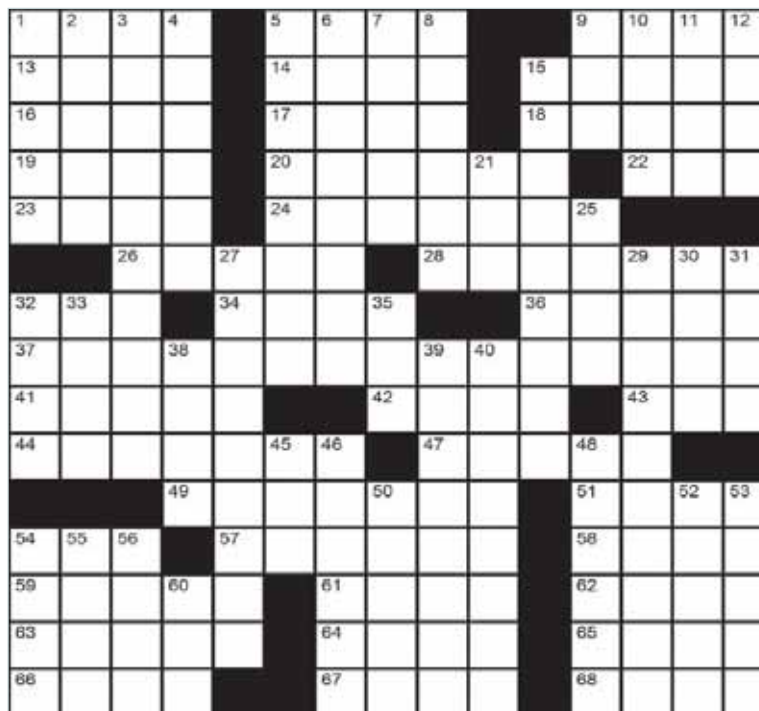

Feb. 20 - March 20

Someone will come to you with a sob story and, of course, you will do what you can to make them feel better. But don't give them money or you may never see it again. Be nice but be smart too. SALLY BROMPTON
